2. The briefing opened with a brief overview by Mr. [ ] of likely international reactions to any changes in the status of US official representation in Jerusalem. He pointed out the political and religious significance of Jerusalem to the Islamic world. [ ] also mentioned the difficulties that would arise in US relations with moderate Arab states and indicated that radical states would probably exploit the move, thereby complicating the Middle East Peace process and possibly even destroying it. 3. [ ] provided more details about the possible world reaction. He explained that CIA stations overseas had been asked to comment on the likely response in their countries. His appraisal included the muted but negative response of the moderates to the violent reaction of terrorist-prone radical states such as Libya, Iran, South Yemen and Syria. [ ] also described the intensity of popular, negative Arabic feeling about US-Israeli relations and estimated that the transfer of US representation could be harmful over the long run to both Israeli and US objectives in the region.
